Louisville Cemetery
Highway 42 & Empire Road
Louisville, Colorado
Historical Background

Located on the Colorado prairie between Denver and Boulder, the town of Louisville was incorporated in 1878 as a pioneer agricultural and coal mining settlement. Populated predominantly by Italian, German, Welsh and French immigrant miners and their families, over time, the settlers were joined by others of Anglo-Saxon and Hispanic origin.

Although cemeteries existed in the larger area, in 1892, the community established its own burial ground southeast of town. The land was acquired by three Louisville fraternal organizations: Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Knights of Pythias, and Improved Order of Red Men.

After the Louisville Cemetery was established, a number of graves were reportedly moved there from the Superior cemetery (this would explain burials at the cemetery with dates of death prior to 1892). The new cemetery divided into three sections of twenty-four burial blocks. Each were further divided into hundreds of burial lots. A grid pattern of narrow unpaved drives traversed the site, providing access first by wagon and later the automobile. Common at the time of the cemetery's founding, the burial sections were individually managed by the fraternal organizations. The City of Louisville eventually became a part-manager of the site, with its own section for the burial of citizens not associated with the fraternal lodges. Evidence of the distinct fraternal sections remains in the cemetery today.

Aside from the graves and markers, it appears that the site was not landscaped throughout its first four decades of use. During those early years, it was most likely a dryland cemetery with native prairie grass and few, if any, trees or shrubs. From the 1930s to the 1970s, the site was maintained with dedication by long-time locals George and Laura Ellis. George Ellis later recalled that a water line was first extended to the cemetery in 1909. However, it remained planted with native grass until 1935, when George and Laura determined to beautify the site. The couple approached the town board with a request for funding to plant trees. The town provided $25 and the Ellis' went to work, recruiting planting help from other citizens. Additional fundraising provided money to purchase hoses. George acquired sod from town citizens in 1940 and created the lawns that remain there today. When a storage shed was needed, George Ellis coordinated the work of a group of Louisville residents to construct one on the site. Rocks were gathered from Eldorado Springs, iron rails to support the roof were acquired from the adjacent coal mine, and the cement work was donated by local businesses. George and Laura spent much of their free time over more than forty years improving, maintaining, and grooming the site. By the 1970s, the fraternal lodges were in decline and the cemetery's care was taken over by the City of Louisville, which allocated regular funding for the site's maintenance.

In the 1990s, the City expanded the site to the west with two additional burial sections. In 2008, the Louisville Cemetery Master Plan was adopted, and in 2009, Phase 1 of the cemetery expansion was completed.

Original documentation prepared by Tatanka Historical Associates, Inc., May 7, 2008 and included in the City's 2010 Cemetery Master Plan. (3)

COAL CREEK MEMORIAL CEMETERY
LAFAYETTE, COLORADO
GARDEN OF HOPE

HISTORY

The Coal Creek Memorial cemetery is owned and operated by the City of Lafayette. The city acquired the cemetery in 2001. Prior owners used the cemetery for burials for many years. It includes a burial park for earth interments, community mausoleums for crypt interments and columbarium buildings for the interment of cremated remains. The city has adopted a memorial park for the cemetery and prohibits upright grave markers. Maintenance for the cemetery is by Department of Parks, Open Space and Golf. Arrangements by City Clerk, 1290 So. Public Rd, Lafayette, Colorado 303-665-5588

Superior Cemetery

This cemetery was once known as the "Old Louisville Cemetery". It is about 1/4 mile from the Superior turn-off (heading east) on the Boulder-Denver highway. It is on a small hill just to the south of the road.

Women of Woodcraft

When I read a book, see some historical monument, or hear something on television or see something on the internet that I had never heard of before, I like to turn to Google and do a search on that topic. That is why it can sometimes take me a horribly long time to finish books. In undertaking the Louisville Cemetery Project which the Indian Peaks Chapter is presently transcribing grave markers, I came across a marker I had never seen before. It was labeled “Women of Woodcraft” Then in typing up other sections, I noticed that other markers also had the “Women of Woodcraft” marker. Was this some kind of community or society that I had never heard of? It was approaching Halloween so I started thinking about witches and secret societies.... I pulled out my computer and did a Google search on Women of Woodcraft. Following are some excerpts that I found. I hope you find this as interesting as I did.

This symbol can be found on several cemetery markers in the Louisville Cemetery.

Woodmen of the World

Woodmen of the World (WOW) is a fraternal organization founded by Joseph Cullen Root in 1890 in Omaha, Nebraska. Root had earlier founded another fraternal organization known as Modern Woodmen of America (MWA). The organization offers insurance to its members and helps those in need.

In cemeteries you will sometimes see gravestones with “Here Lies a Woodman of the World” engraved on them. Usually these will be accompanied by a symbol like the example below. Logs, along with axes and other woodworking tools, are common motifs. Sometimes the grave markers themselves will be in the shape of logs or tree stumps.

These are called “treestones.” The symbol below includes the Latin Woodmen phrase “Dum Tacet Clamat,” which means “Though Silent He Speaks.”

“Treestones” are basically grave markers in the shape of a tree. Often they will look like tree stumps or logs. Some will have branches. They are usually associated with the Woodmen of the World, and their various associated groups, although using tree-shaped grave markers pre-dates the organization. The treestones of Woodmen will usually include their symbols, and they might be inscribed with “Dum Tacet Clamet” (“though silent he speaks”), or “here rests a Woodman of the World.” Trees, branches and leaves are common symbols of nature in cemeteries.

According to Douglas Keister’s Stories in Stone, treestones were derived from the Victorian rusticity movement, and at one time could be ordered from the Sears and Roebuck catalog.(6)

Women of Woodcraft was a female auxiliary to Woodmen of the World (WOW), Women of Woodcraft covered the nine states of the Woodmen’s Pacific Jurisdiction: California, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, Oregon, Utah, Washington and Wyoming. In 1917 Women of Woodcraft changed their name to Neighbors of Woodcraft (NOW). In 2001 NOW returned to its roots and merged with WOW (1). In 1898 Woodmen Life had more than 88,000 members from all over the country.

Today, Woodmen members do not simply share the fact that they have purchased insurance or annuities through the same organization. Woodmen are a fraternal benefit society, with members connected by their membership and also their desire to better their lives, their families' lives and their communities.

Woodmen is a nonprofit organization, owned and governed by its members. Delegates are elected from 2,600 local lodges to jurisdictional (state) conventions and then to the National Convention. (7)

Today, I found one Woodman Chapter in Colorado, located in Castle Rock. For more information about Woodmen, see www.woodmenlife.org/about/history.cfm

WoodmenLife believes students deserve to be rewarded for more than just a GPA. Do you know a student who spends extra hours volunteering? Who loves America and everything it stands for? He or she could be eligible for the WoodmenLife Focus Forward Scholarship. Nearly $1 million in scholarships is available for 2017 or 2018 high school graduates who are WoodmenLife members. (7)

If you would like to see some grave markers with the “Woman of Woodcraft” marker, visit the Louisville Cemetery located at the corner of Highway 42 and Empire Road, just north of the Colorado Tech Center. Also, if you would like to help Indian Peaks Genealogy Records Committee transcribe cemetery markers, contact Karen Yudnich at kyudnich@yahoo.com. It is a peaceful and fun thing to do and you will learn more about the community you live in and make some new friends.

SUPERIOR'S PIONEER CEMETERY, Part I

One is greeted by a sense of awe and reverence upon entering any burial place, but the panorama visible from one once known as "the Cemetery on Coal Creek" make today's Superior Cemetery especially unique. The eye can't help but follow a line from Long's Peak southward across the Indian Peaks, Arapahoe Glacier, the Flatirons to Eldorado Canyon and beyond. This site, also in view of Original Superior and is dotted with Black-eyed Susans, yucca, sage complete with cattle leisurely grazing in the foreground, is where pioneers living in this end of the Coal Creek Valley began to bury their departed loved ones back in 1873.

The Superior Cemetery was also once known as the Old Louisville Cemetery and was formally deeded in 1876 even though little two-year old Lottie Eggieston was buried there in 1873. The pioneer farming families of the Superior area decided on the location which was given over to them by the Minks family. It was located on a hill near a freight road that connected the territorial capital of Denver and the mining supply town of Boulder. The Boulder-Denver Turnpike would later be built along much of the route of this ancient road and is known today as U.S. Highway 36 and is also visible from the Cemetery. Following the burial of Lottie Eggleston at least fifty-five other people were buried there, the last one being when local farmer George Shockey was interred in 1949. The Rocky Mountain Fuel Company, owners of local mines particularly Superior's Industrial, acquired rights to the cemetery property back in 1910 and later dedicated the cemetery to Boulder County in 1976. In 2002, the Town of Superior took it over and since has initiated many improvements, especially the construction of a new iron fence complete with prairie dog abatement features.

Many insights into a town's history can be deduced from studying its gravestones. For example, two Civil War veterans are interred in the Superior Cemetery. Although the headstone of Jacob R. Wolverton, who served in the Illinois Infantry, is no longer legible, one of the best preserved is that of James Morton, who we learn was a soldier in the 142nd Pennsylvania Infantry. That unit was mustered out of Fayette County, Pennsylvania in 1862 and discharged in May of 1865. Nothing is known about his service specifically, but his unit served in many of the most important battles of the War Between the States: Fredricksburg, Chancellorsville, and Gettysburg, to name but a few. What is known is that he was related to early Coal Creek Valley residents and that he lost an arm due to an accident in one of the coal mines in Marshall.

Another lesson from the past is that infant mortality was high here in Boulder County as it was throughout the nation. Sadly, twenty of the fifty-five known graves in the cemetery are of children three years of age or less, Imagine the sorrow and anguish of the parents who buried their young children and imagine especially the grief of the Atkin family as three of their children, including twins, were buried in a matter of eleven months in 1882 and 1883.

The headstone of Private James Morton, one of Superior's Civil War Veterans.

Their son Thomas was less than two, Charlotte not quite one, and her twin sister Sarah just over a year old, Mary Jane McKay was three years old, Clarence Spicer twenty eight days old, Walter Clayton twenty one days, Harold Harris one month, and a baby remembered now only by the last name, Sheratt, four months. Others too, are remembered only by the barest of descriptors: Searcy infant, Ray baby, Jurado baby.

In all likelihood, child and adult died in the various epidemics that were so common generations ago. In the past contagious diseases swept through the country at a level unimaginable today: smallpox in 1905, diphtheria in 1907, and the most severe of all came in 1918 in the form of influenza. More Americans died on the home front in 1918 and 1919 from this awful contagion than were killed in World War I. This too is reflected in Superior's Cemetery as Fred Willhausen, George Admire, Walter Wood and Albert Eggleston, among others, were buried during those years and are thought to be victims of the epidemic.

Look for the second part of the story of the Superior Cemetery in the next issue of the Superior Historian.

SUPERIOR'S PIONEER CEMETERY, Part 2

The Superior Cemetery encompasses one and a half acres and is located on a hillside near the site of the old Enterprise Mine which was active in the 1890's. The coal mine took its name from the Enterprise Farm on which the Cemetery and the mine were founded. The first burial in Superior's Cemetery was in 1873 and it was officially deeded in 1876. Although around ninety possible graves have been detected through ground penetrating radar, there are fifty-five known graves and thirty two remaining stones in the cemetery, at least twenty six needing repair. It is hoped that one project on tap for the future is to confirm just how many graves actually exist in what was once called "the cemetery on Coal Creek." After years of languishing, the Cemetery has been deeded back to the Town of Superior and has received Landmark Designation by the Boulder County Commissioners. A plaque was presented to the Town during Preservation Week in 2002 by the Commissioners commemorating this designation.

Mention was made of the Great Influenza Epidemic of 1918-1919 in Part I of the Cemetery's story. The best estimates are that twenty million people died worldwide and 548,000 in the United States (more than died in fighting World War 1 from this catastrophic epidemic. Walter Wood worked as a telegraph operator at the Colorado and Southern station at Louisville junction (just east of the present-day Storage Technology plant). Mr. Wood, buried in the Superior Cemetery, was a victim of the influenza epidemic. German immigrant Frederick "Fritz" Wilihausen was a local dairyman who farmed at the Meadowbrook Farm near Marshall and Cloverleaf Dairy located south of Boulder. He very magnanimously nursed victims of the epidemic with no apparent damage to his health. In spite of that, his death in 1918 was due to influenza contracted from some source other than the sufferers he helped during their travail.

There were also those who lost their lives in unusual ways. One of the Lemon sisters was killed as she was hit by a train when she became trapped on a railroad trestle. Jerome Shockey suffered the fate of too many coal miners when he died in a cave-in at the Red Ash Mine in Marshall. It was thought, although incorrectly, that John "Dude" Searcy might have been buried in the cemetery as was his infant niece who died in 1911. He was a strike breaker who crossed the picket line during the miner's strike of 1911 and suffered a fatal gunshot wound during a confrontation at the train depot in Superior. It has since been confirmed that Searcy is interred in Boulder's Green Mountain Cemetery. Charles Seeley was the son of an early settler in Superior and the victim of a fatal wound from a firearm in 1902, The irony is that he was serving as Superior's Town Marshall when he was killed while tending to an altercation in one of the town saloons.

The story of the sad, early deaths of children was mentioned in Part 1 of this story and illustrated by the fact that at least twenty of the fifty-five known graves are those of children aged three or less. Another tragic illustration of the adversity presented by life in the coal camp of Superior was the death of the Gomez baby in 1913 whose first name is now lost to the ages. The Green sisters, Mildred and Mabel, themselves hardly more than children, were asked to be pall bearers for the child. The girls, attired in white dresses, carried the little casket from Superior up a dusty road that followed the railroad tracks all the way to the cemetery. Now some ninety years later, it is not certain whether the toddler was a boy or a girl, and its grave is unmarked and location unknown.

Jacob Wolverton is the second of two Civil War veterans interred in the Superior Cemetery. He was a private in Company A of the 13th Illinois Infantry which was mustered out of Lee County, Illinois. Wolverton was from the town of Dixon and served from May of 1861 to December of 1862 when he was discharged due to what was listed as "disabil." without an explanation of what the disability might have been. His headstone is not legible which indicates that it might have been moved to this site after an original burial elsewhere. Private Wolverton leaves us an unresolved mystery concerning his life, in this area.

The Superior Cemetery is typical of most yet a unique place in its own right. Some stones are illegible and others perfectly clear. There are stones flat to the ground and others patterned after Egyptian obelisks. A few family plots are surrounded by ornate fences and, in one case, a fence is in place but there is no evidence of a grave inside it. Another iron railing is complete with pineapple decorations at the corners. One last look at this special place embraces a soaring hawk riding the currents of air, the distinctive chirping of a prairie dog, the sunset turning the clouds pink, and a garter snake slithering his way home. It is a special place, indeed.

VISITING THE CEMETERY

People are welcome to visit the Superior Cemetery but are asked to follow proper etiquette when dosing so. The cemetery is accessible from the Avista Hospital parking lot. Bear to the left until a dirt road appears at the left of the lot. You can park here and walk to the cemetery or drive on with the understanding that the road is narrow and rough. The road goes under US 36 and up the hillside and the cemetery is obvious at that point.

- Please keep the gate closed at all times.
- Please do not leave any litter behind.
- Since it is a final resting place, please be respectful of the special nature of the cemetery.
- Since 'many of the stones are unstable, please do not touch or make any rubbings of the gravestones while they are in their unrestored state.
- There is no access from the west due to private property limitations.
- Anyone having questions pertaining to cemetery access can call Jennifer Dunn at the Town of Superior.
